

1. What are your core values and beliefs?

Ans: As a person my core values will be upholding honesty and ethical behavior in all aspects of my life. Treating others with kindness and consideration. Understanding and sharing the feelings of others. Embracing new ideas and perspectives.

I believe in continued personal growth. This is a commitment to myself that expands my knowledge, skills, and self-awareness.

2. What are your goals and aspirations?

Ans: As a front-end developer my goal is to become a quick problem solver and achieve expertise in front-end new technologies. Designing and developing visually appealing and user-friendly interfaces. I'm passionate about software development, and I'm excited about the prospect of contributing my skills and knowledge to impactful projects.

3. What are the first steps you will take to build my personal brand?

Ans: At first, I will create a personal website optimize my LinkedIn profile, and build a strong portfolio that showcases my work, create valuable content, attend network events, and Participate in Online Communities.

4. How does personal branding differ from self-promotion and why is this distinction important?

Ans: personal branding is a holistic and authentic approach to shaping my professional identity, while self-promotion is more focused on promoting specific achievements or skills for immediate gain. Striking the right balance between both can help you build a strong, genuine, and sustainable professional presence.

5. What are you most proud of?

Ans: When I completed a particularly challenging project it had a significant impact and also when I received positive feedback from users of the software I developed.